By Staff

Countless people have made a fortune working in the TV and film industry. Gary Davis and television's Jays Davis and television's Jay Leno have both spent untold sums of money amassing impressive collections of classic cars and motorcycles. Another successful figure in the Hollywood scene who has garnered a massive stable of awe-inspiring iconic scoots is Stuart Parr-a renowned architect, surf and motorcycle enthusiast, and the producer whose works includes 2002's 8-Mile, 2005's Get Rich or Die Tryin ', and most recently 2015's Southpaw.

Closed door, the modern-day renaissance man has been opted to share his museum-quality examples with the public via 'The Art of the Italian Two Wheel', a new exhibition in the Miami featuring 35 prestigious Italian bikes from Parr's collection.
